ABOUT

DR. HUBERT J.P. SCHOEMAKER

1950 - 2006

Hubert J.P. Schoemaker led a life of almost mythical proportions. Whether he was competing as a national caliber athlete, serving as a pioneering scientist or community leader, building firms as an immensely successful entrepreneur, or even just surviving - for a record number of years - as a cancer patient. Hubert consistently pulled off outsized achievements.

Through his infectious optimism and drive to succeed, Centocor became one of the nation's most successful biotechnology companies with products that have improved the lives of many. His cofounding of the Eastern Technology Council and Technology Leaders venture fund provided a platform through which he supported the growth of regional high technology companies, mentored executives, and helped the Delaware Valley become a "hotspot" for biotechnology.

Always living on the edge of discovery, Hubert later founded Neuronix, a company developing adult stem cell-based therapeutics for a number of diseases. He did all this with an unforgettable "my cup runneth over" attitude despite his disabling illness. Hubert literally set out to help millions - and he succeeded. Hubert's passion and generosity were especially focused on Melmark, where his eldest daughter, Maureen, had resided for 28 years.

Love of art and music, of family and friends, and an ebullient and generous personality, were all a part of this legendary man.

Hubert did more than achieve, he loved.

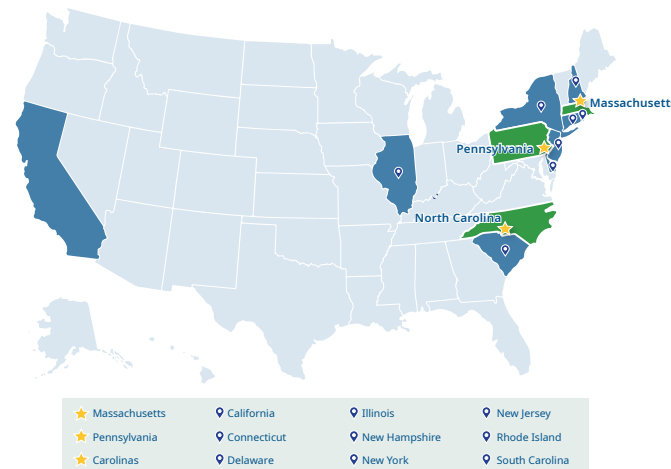

CELEBRATING 60 YEARS OF MISSION FIRST MOMENTS

Melmark was founded in 1965 as a home for children with developmental disabilities. Today, Melmark Pennsylvania serves 100+ children and 170+ adults on its 55-acre Berwyn, PA campus which includes a state-of-the-art special education school, adult day and vocational programs, campus and in-community residences, and healthcare and rehabilitative services. Melmark New England, a community-based, approved private special education school, opened in Massachusetts in 1998, eventually expanding to include residential services, adult services, early intervention, and a second day school. In 2018, Melmark expanded once again with the opening of a special education day school in Charlotte, North Carolina.

MISSION

Melmark is a non-profit multi-state human service provider with premier private special education schools, professional development, training, and research centers. We are committed to enhancing the lives of individuals within diverse communities with autism, intellectual and developmental disabilities, and their families by providing exceptional evidence-based and applied behavior analytic services to every individual, every day.
